Why Riverview State University?

I am interested in Riverview State University because its project-based curriculum would let me connect Physics with questions that matter outside a single classroom. I hope to learn from students with different experiences, use faculty feedback to improve my work, and contribute to teams that value both evidence and clear communication.

Community Contribution

Through environmental club volunteer, I learned to notice which tasks are preventing a group from moving forward. I would bring that practical habit to campus organizations: listen first, clarify the goal, volunteer for concrete work, and help the group document what it learns.

Academic Curiosity

A question I want to explore is how tools and methods from Physics can be applied responsibly when information is incomplete. I am especially interested in courses that combine analysis, writing, and collaborative problem solving.
